I went to see Dr. Clark because I was desperate. My toy poodle was growling at my 1-year-old grandson. The Animal Clinic was my last desperate attempt before deciding to get rid of the dog to protect the baby. After checking out the dog, the staff gave me many options for how to change this behavior. They were very supportive and encouraging, and full of lots of information. I came home willing to give it a try. Very shortly there was a big change in the dog's behavior toward the baby, and now I have no worries about their interactions at all. The baby has learned to be gentle around her, and the dog has learned that she is not the boss.

They also introduced me to the gentle leader leash. My dog is only 10 pounds, but I had given up walking her because it was an unpleasant experience with her pulling all the time. With this leash, she is very responsive. In fact, even my grandson can take her for a walk! I am very thankful for the Animal Clinic and all their help. They are great!
